Greece, Italy and Australia

GREECE_

Although vines have been cultivated from the wild grape for millennia, it wasn't until the Greek colonization that wine-making flourished in the world that we know.

Greek wines, though their place in history, are seldom known. With varieties that can not be found on any other slopes over the world, Greece is home to the very beginnings of what we have come to know about wine.

ITALY_

Viticulture was introduced into Sicily and southern Italy by the Mycenaean Greeks, and was well established when the extensive Greek colonization transpired around 800 BC.

Italian wine, as dominant a wine presence in the world that it is, can be said that it owes its blood lines to the Ancient Greeks.

That being said, Italian wine is held in as high esteem as that of some of the best chateau's and vineyards of France. With some of the most diverse grape varieties on the planet, Italian wine remains one the worlds largest wine producers

AUSTRALIA_

Viticulture goes back in Australian history as far to the 18th century (1788).

First attempts at wine making failed in Australia's harsh conditions. With perseverance settlers managed successfully cultivate vines for wine making in the early 1800's.

Australia now produces about 40% of the worlds wine and is held in equal regard.
